

MUTUAL FUND SHARE CLASSES NOT AVAILABLE TO BAIRD FEE-BASED ADVISORY ACCOUNTS

Mutual funds offer many different share classes, which differ in terms of the types of investors who are eligible to purchase share classes, investment minimums, front-end and contingent deferred sales charges, distribution (or 12b-1) fees, shareholder or administrative service fees, redemption fees and other operating expenses.

When you have a fee-based advisory account at Baird, you will pay Baird a fee which is normally expressed as a percentage of the value of the assets in your fee-based account. You are generally not charged a commission or sales charge on the securities transactions (purchases or sales) executed for your fee-based account.

Baird generally limits the mutual fund share classes that can be purchased in your fee-based advisory account. These limits are designed to enable clients with fee-based accounts to avoid having to pay a sales charge on their purchases of mutual fund shares and an ongoing distribution (or 12b-1) fee on their mutual fund holdings. The goal of these limits is to ensure that clients with fee-based advisory accounts have access to low cost share classes in furtherance of Baird's fiduciary duty to those clients. Specifically, Baird's policy for mutual fund investments in fee-based advisory accounts is to offer a share class for funds within a mutual fund family that is generally the lowest cost share class across the funds within the fund family, provided that the funds and share classes are available through Baird's mutual fund clearing agreement with Schwab. Not all funds or share classes are available through Schwab either because Schwab does not have contracts in place for those funds or share classes or because Baird has not requested Schwab to make those funds or share classes available. In selecting the share class for a mutual fund family to be made available for purchase by clients with fee-based advisory accounts, Baird considers a number of factors, including the number of funds within the fund family that offer the share class, client positions in and demand for those funds, and the availability of the share classes and funds for purchase on the Schwab mutual fund trading platform. Baird will review its share class selection at least on an annual basis to determine whether less expensive share classes have become broadly available within a fund family. Because Baird selects what it believes to be the lowest cost share class across all of the funds within a fund family and not on a fund-by-fund basis and because some share classes and funds may not be available on Schwab's platform, it is possible that particular funds within a fund family may have lower cost share classes than the share class selected by Baird for that fund family.

In some instances, a share class for a particular fund may have a 12b-1 fee. However, if a fund pays a 12b-1 fee to Baird with respect to a share class purchased for a fee-based account, Baird will rebate or credit that fee to the client's account. To better understand how a 12b-1 would be reimbursed in your account, see the below example:

A client purchases ABC Fund in Month 1 and moved to an advisory program at the beginning of Month 2. ABC Fund has an annual 12b-1 fee of 0.25%. Since the client is holding a 12b-1 paying fund in an advisory program, Baird will rebate the client for 12b-1 fees paid during the time the client was in advisory.

	Month-End ABC Fund Balance	12b-1 Paid by Client
Month 1 (31 days)	$10,000	$2.12
Month 2 (28 days)	$12,000	$2.30
Month 3 (31 days)	$15,000	$3.18

Total Days in Advisory: 28 + 31 = 59 days

Average Daily Balance:  $(($12,000 \times 28 \text{ days}) + ($15,000 \times 31 \text{ days}) / 59 \text{ days} = $13,576.27)$

Average Daily Balance x Annualized 12b-1 Fee:  $$13,576.27 \times (.0025/365 \times 59) = $5.49$

MUTUAL FUND SHARE CLASSES NOT AVAILABLE TO BAIRD FEE-BASED ADVISORY ACCOUNTS

Many of mutual fund share classes available for purchase by Baird fee-based accounts may have a shareholder service or administrative service fee that is paid out of fund assets to Baird, and Baird retains that fee. The fact that mutual fund share classes offered to clients with fee-based accounts pay a shareholder service or administrative service fee or that Baird may receive compensation from Schwab for the mutual fund positions it holds for Baird clients presents a conflict of interest to Baird in that Baird may have an incentive to offer to such clients more of these share classes that pay Baird a shareholder service or administrative service fee or from which Baird receives payment from Schwab or to promote or recommend funds with these share classes in order to increase Baird's revenues. Baird Financial Advisors, however, do not share in any shareholder service or administrative service fees paid to Baird, in terms of their compensation. A less expensive share class for a particular fund may be available and appropriate, although they are not offered to fee-based advisory accounts through Baird.

To better understand the difference between what you pay while using the Baird standardized share class compared to a less expensive share class available outside of Baird, see the hypothetical example below in which Baird has selected Class A-1 to be available across the fund family but does not make available Class A-2 shares of a particular fund within that same fund family:

	Investment Amount	Share Class	Expense Ratio	Annual Expenses Paid
Client X	$100,000	A-1	0.43%	$430.00
Client Y	$100,000	A-2	0.35%	$350.00
		Difference paid by Client X:		$80.00

For the sake of transparency, Baird has listed below the names of mutual funds, fund families and less expensive share classes that are not available through Baird, as well as the differences in the expense ratios between the share classes Baird makes available and other less expensive share classes. Some of the share classes listed below may not be available to all investors. Please review the prospectuses for the mutual funds you are interested in purchasing. Please contact your Baird Financial Advisor for more information.
